Language exams to study abroad

As mentioned above, it's mandatory that you take up English tests to prove your ability to communicate well in the language. Most universities and colleges abroad ask for proof of English. - 1. IELTS
- 2. TOEFL

Why English language entrance tests matter?

A general assumption is that if you don't know how to speak, write and read in English, then how are you supposed to study abroad? This thought arises because of the fact that the countries you choose to study are all English-speaking countries, where the preferred mode of communication is in English, inside and outside the campus.

Even if you are interested in another foreign language and want to study in that language, you'll need English, day in and day out while you live in a foreign country.

Having said that, don't you think the onus is on you to make an effort to understand the lingua franca of the world?

English is by far the most widely spoken language all over the world. English language tests validate your skills and level of understanding of complex subjects.

The tests are a direct way to assess your competence in the language. That's why most language tests have dedicated score ranges, which indicate what type of a test-taker you are. For instance, in IELTS a band of 7 and above indicates that you are an above-average communicator in English.

Entrance exams to study abroad after 12th and 10th

Can I study abroad after 12th from India? Or can I study overseas after 10th?

We often hear these questions from the students who visit us.

The majority of students who want to study overseas find themselves struggling with too many choices. They can't figure out which course or exam to choose for their abroad education goal.

One of the most common mistakes that study abroad students often make is not planning well ahead of time. If you want to move abroad for your college admissions at an undergraduate level, then start during your grade 10th studies. And if you want to get admissions abroad after 12th, start a year earlier preferably in 11th grade.

The major reason behind starting early is you need to prepare for exams that will help you get admissions abroad.

The prep time you give yourself is important since a lot can go wrong there. For instance, if you are appearing for IELTS, you must give yourself 6 months of your time before you start applying abroad. In case you don't qualify in the first attempt, you can reattempt for the test within those 6 months.

At Kanan International, many IELTS test-takers have achieved good scores in their very first attempt. Reach out to our study abroad consultants to know how we can help you.

The common entrance exams to appear for after your 12th are -

- 1. IELTS
- 2. PTE
- 3. TOEFL
- 4. GMAT
- 5. GRE

As mentioned above, each of the exams have different requirements and those are taken for different purposes. If a student aspires to be in business and management, he or she must go with GRE or GMAT depending on the country and the business school they want to be enrolled with.

On the other hand, if you are looking at Australia, PTE could be a good option for you to consider and apply for PTE-specific scholarships. IELTS and TOEFL are accepted the world over so it wouldn't be difficult to decide among those. However, some countries accept either of the two exams.

SAT

ACT

Please note that neither of the two tests are easy. So if you think you can skip one and take up the other exam, it may not make any difference.
